This special issue focuses on the alterations in mitochondrial dynamics and bioenergetics pathways that have been consistently reported across psychiatric illnesses. The mitochondrial-targeted therapies in mental disorders, depicted on the cover, are discussed in the article by Ben-Shachar and Ene (in this issue, pages 770–779). The authors review experimental and clinical treatments that target mitochondrial functioning, including pharmacological, nutritional, physical, and cellular approaches. Artwork created by Hila M. Ene with assistance from Dorit Ben-Shachar.
